

I am outraged by Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election. From what I have heard this documentary cannot be categorized as news--it is produced with a specific point of view and does not presented other perspectives.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. If this documentary is pro-Bush it must be balanced by a pro-Kerry message of equal time (the idea that Kerry would not have this right because the documentary is about him is absurd). Obviously to be meaningful this needs to happen in a similar time slot and before the election. Waiting to take action until after the election makes the action moot.

Thank you.
